It is expected that the new ferry on the Salt river will be in running order to morrow.

Business begins to grow apace.
More new furniture received for the district courtroom.
Eighty degrees is being left somewhat down the scale by the mercury these days.

Judge Finney left yesterday's court with the trial of Yuma against the Territory, where he opens up today for a long term of court, probably not less than six weeks.
The incorporators of the "Gazette Publishing Company" are H. H. McNeill, John F. Alsop, C. L. Mosher, A. A. Synch, and George Hoadley.
Two families came into the valley yesterday who numbered seven members each. Rapid increase of population. More of the kind wanted. Lots of room.
A grand strike is in progress on the Union Pacific railroad. Wages were reduced of freight handlers and shop men, and they have ceased work all along the line.
Mr. Osenberg, of Prescott, arrived by the morning train from Yuma. He is looking for a piece to start up a harness shop and think of locating among us.
Sheriff Orme left with the murderer, Shadrick, yesterday for Yuma, where he will wait out the remainder of his worthless life. He is now not over 25 years of age.
We are in receipt of a most excellent article on the "Watic Industry" - has no reference to school-teaching - which we shall be pleased to reproduce when opportunity offers us space.
Deputy Marshal Evans shifts the blame for the failure to have the horse grabbers punished to the shoulders of Mr. A. C. Baker, of this place, in a talk with the editor of the Union Herald. Where will he put the failure to punish the barley thieves?
The Sulphur Valley News is the name of it and it is a new six cent exchange published by McFarlin & Montague, at Wilcox, Cochise Co. We have not been able to determine its political complexion but judge that it is entirely independent. It is well printed, well edited, and a very creditable affair to Cochise county and the gentlemen having it in charge.
On Saturday evening at 5 o'clock the courtroom was crowded by an audience eager to hear the sentence to be pronounced by Judge Finney in the case of Shadrick, the occasion having been set for that hour. After some little delay, the judge made his appearance and the prisoner was brought in by the officers. He looked somewhat nervous and dogged but not so anxious as when he sat awaiting the verdict of the jury the morning. Mr. Campbell, of the firm of Cox & Campbell, attorneys for the defendant, moved for a new trial, mentioning several points, among which were that this verdict was not in accordance with the evidence, the defendant had not received a fair and impartial trial, and several other reasons why a new trial should be granted. The whole was overruled by the judge, who then commanded Shadrick to "stand up." "Have you anything to say your sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" After a little hesitation replied: "I have nothing to say."
"Have the counsel anything to say?"
Mr. Campbell here called the attention of the judge to the previous good character of the prisoner, and that the matter was an open question as to whether the crime he committed was murder in the second degree or manslaughter.
The judge then expressed himself as not particularly impressed with the plea of "previous good character." He said that three justices were kept busy trying criminal cases, and that the calendars of the courts were crowded with them, notwithstanding the "previous good character" of many criminals. A young man when he came to the Territory thought he was not up with the times till he carried a six-shooter on one side and a bowie knife on the other, and kept an old pistol as a third.
Until such practice stops here, and the six-shooter is left at home, and it becomes a disgrace to have a prostitute for whom a man fights on occasion as in this, the large criminal calendar of the Territory would continue to be crowded.
When a man draws a revolver he means to kill, and when he seeks a quarrel, as in this case, and for such a cause, he is not entitled to much sympathy. Defendant had brought this condition of things upon himself and he must bear the consequences, and the judge thought he would not be doing his duty to him, if he should make the sentence less than the full penalty of the law.
The judge then pronounced the sentence of imprisonment for the term of the natural life of the prisoner.
The large crowd in attendance were disposed to applaud and finally an attempt to cheer was made, but the courtroom was quickly cleared by the sheriff and bailiffs and no further disturbance was made, though the crowd was evidently in bad disposition and had the sentence been for less than life no doubt the prisoner would have been summarily dealt with.
The last of the three escapes from the penitentiary has been brought back. He was captured last Monday at Gila Bend by two of the guards, whose names we did not know.

ED. HERALD: Some three or four years ago, the writer of this article wrote several communications that were published in the Express, an independent paper published in Phoenix at the time it was, in fact, two independent papers, the editor, however, of Yuma and Maricopa counties, which is the reason why it is not published in Phoenix yet.
Those articles were written for the purpose of establishing the fact that, before Arizona could have a judiciary, or when the people could rely for justice in the administration of law in cases that would come before the courts for adjudication or before the Territory would have a judiciary in which the people would have confidence, the Territory should have an elective judiciary, and urge the legislature that was in session at the time most of these articles were being published, to pass a bill creating a special and elective judiciary. In summing up the then past history of the judiciary, the writer referred to several cases of mismanagement, deception, and fraud on the part of the judiciary, in language more forcible than eloquent, and more pointed than polite, but stayed with it all the same. Since that time the courts in two of our judicial districts have given better satisfaction, but the judiciary in the other district has not by any means had a walk over. The courts at the present time are probably all right and disposed to give us all the justice we want and probably more still, we can't shut our eyes to the fact that the officials set to preside over the affairs of state in the Territories by the general government, are seldom selected because of their qualifications or general fitness for the position they are expected to fill, but from the fact that they are recommended by some political power in the dominant party. And if the cause of said recommendation could be ascertained and made public, would speak but little for either the recommended or recommender.
At all events the gigantic efforts of some of the officials of the S. P. R. to fit a fraudulent Spanish grant over the best portion of Arizona, are altogether too great a magnitude to be left in the hands of a suspicious judiciary; and I think the people of Maricopa county are pretty well decided on that fact.
While political conventions are plotting to save the nation by saving themselves, had not the people of central Arizona better be making some efforts to save their homes, and leave the politicians to the magnificent charge of saving themselves.
